MEMORANDUM OPINION

Petitioner is a New York resident appearing pro se. He has filed a Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus and an application to proceed in forma pauperis ("IFP"). Petitioner challenges the criminal charges brought against Jason Daniel Riddle in connection with purportedly "a mostly peaceful assembly by peaceful persons in Washington D.C. on January 6[,] 2021." Pet. at 1. For the following reasons, both the Petition and the IFP application will be denied, and this case will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

"Article III of the United States Constitution limits the judicial power to deciding 'Cases' and 'Controversies." In re Navy Chaplaincy, 534 F.3d 756, 759 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (quoting U.S. Const. art. III, § 2). "One element of the case-or-controversy requirement is that plaintiffs must establish that they have standing to sue." Comm. on Judiciary v. McGahn, 968 F.3d 755, 762 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (internal quotation marks omitted). A party has standing for purposes of Article III if he has "(1) suffered an injury in fact, (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision." Id. at 763 (quoting Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016)). "The defect of standing is a defect in subject matter jurisdiction." Haase v. Sessions, 835 F.2d 902, 906 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

Petitioner does not allege that he has sustained (or is likely to sustain) an injury resulting from the challenged conduct, nor generally can he as a lay person prosecute the claims of another individual in federal court. See 28 U.S.C. § 1654 ("In all courts of the United States the parties may plead and conduct their own cases personally or by counsel[.]"); accord Georgiades v.

Martin-Trigona, 729 F.2d 831, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1984); U.S. ex rel. Rockefeller v. Westinghouse

Elec. Co., 274 F. Supp. 2d 10, 16 (D.D.C. 2003).

More, the "writ of habeas corpus shall not extend to a [petitioner] unless" he is "in custody" under some authority. 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c). A person is generally considered "in custody" if he is being held in a prison or jail, or if he is released on conditions of probation or parole, see, e.g., Jones v. Cunningham, 371 U.S. 236, 240-43 (1963) (holding that a paroled petitioner is "in custody" because parole restrictions "significantly restrain petitioner's liberty"), or subject to other

"substantial" non-confinement restraints on liberty, see, e.g., Hensley v. Municipal Court, 411 U.S.

345, 351–53 (1973) (holding that a petitioner released on his own recognizance pending appeal of his sentence was "in custody" for purpose of habeas).

Nothing in the instant petition suggests that Petitioner is incarcerated, on probation or parole, or otherwise restrained by the government, and Petitioner has not established his legal authority and qualifications to file on Riddle's behalf. See Whitmore v. Arkansas, 495 U.S. 149, 163-64 (1990) (discussing limitations of next friend status in habeas actions and placing the burden "on the 'next friend' clearly to establish the propriety of his status and thereby justify the jurisdiction of the court"). Thus, this case will be dismissed by separate order.
